AN UNUSUAL SALE

Bought at forced sale for cash the name, good-will, patents, patterns and merchandise of the Henry & S. G. Lindeman Piano Company, including 612 Pianos and Player-Pianos, we offer tomorrow. Thursday, simultaneously in our two stores, New York and Philadelphia,

New Pianos and Player-Pianos

At Little More Than Half Price New York has been overrun with so many

"syndicated sales" of pianos put into stores by outside ownership and management that we feel it necessary to say at the outset:

These pianos and player-pianos are owned absolutely by John Wanamaker, sold by John Wanamaker and guaranteed by John Wanamaker-the guarantee following each instrument into the home and remain-

We own the Lindeman factory, which has bought out the control of the Henry and S. G. Lindeman organization, as explained below.

We own also the Emerson piano factory in Boston and the Schomacher piano factory in Philadelphia.

The making and selling of pianos is a fixed part of the Wanamaker business.

Protecting the Fine Old Lindeman Name

William Lindeman, the father and grandfather of the makers of these pianos, established his business in New York in 1836. The business continued under one ownership, one management and in one factory, producing more than a hundred thousand pianos, until 1900, when Henry & S. G. Lindeman set up a separate establishment.

In 1910 John Wanamaker took over the goodwill, patents and patterns of the original company, Lindeman & Sons. And in 1914 Lindeman & Sons absorbed the Henry & S. G. Lindeman Com-

Thus is welded together under Wanamaker idance all the Lindeman piano interests, protecting and preserving for all time this fine old piano name and product.

With the amalgamation, sixty Henry & S. G. Lindeman pianos, practically completed, came into our hands. These we placed on sale last Autumn. They sold immediately.

In addition, came 612 Henry & S. G. Lindeman instruments in process of manufacture. These we completed in the Lindeman factory, getting the materials from manufacturers who supplied them to Henry & S. G. Lindeman, purchasing them at low prices because not usable for other purposes.

Producing the instruments in this way at very w cost, we now offer

Payable a Small Sum Down and a Small Sum a Month

New York and community alone would no doubt quickly take into its homes all of these 612 instruments. Never before, that we know of, have pianos and player-pianos of such high quality been offered at prices so low. Yet we owe it to our customers in both cities to give equal chance to all, and so we open the sale simultaneously in our two stores.

Actually on Our New York Sales Floor

tomorrow will be 215 of these instruments-New York's first allotment. See them. Count them. Examine them. Test them. Compare them with any instruments you choose. There is no mystery. Everything is open and above board. All the pianos are new, perfect, and splendid in tone. Any one will become a life-long friend in your

"Standard" Action in the Players

The new 88-note model, of course, playing any roll of music.

The "Standard" is one of the actions that we use in our roll-of-honor pianos, when we do not use the Angelus. It is simple in construction, strongly built, exceptionally flexible, easy of control and gives the highest shades of phrasing.

Deliveries Begin at Once

No need to wait. The actual piano you select goes into your home at once - bringing with it music and joy and love and life.
